

BEGIN WORK ON WOLF ROAD

Mokena Man Finds House Located on Road

To find that you have built a valuable home on a street site instead of on what was supposed to be a lot, is the experience that Joe Kolber of Mokena has had.

Mr. Kolber appeared before the village board Wednesday and told the following story:

About eight years ago he purchased a lot 50 feet wide and 200 hundred feet deep from Conrad Schenkel. He secured an abstract for this land and also a deed. He made a loan from the Mokena bank to build a modern brick bungalow and the bank holds the abstract.

Recently Byron Nelson who is building west of Mr. Kolber had a survey made of his land and then it was discovered that an old roadway 66 feet wide running from the Rock Island tracks north for several hundred feet was located on the Schenkel property and according to the village records had never been vacated by the village although it has never been used for road purposes. Mr. Kolber in buying the lot in reality bought 50 feet of the old road and as it now stands his house is located in the center of the road. Mr. Kolber has asked the village board to vacate the road in question and the board has turned the matter over to Attorney Howard Schlutz, the village attorney for further investigation and action. Edward Schenkel, executor of the Schenkel estate appeared before the village board and said that his father did not know of the old road when he sold the lot to Mr. Kolber. Mr. Schenkel said his father bought four large lots from Henry Volk for $160 many years ago and bought the road unknowingly at the time. All the property to the west of the Kolber place is badly mixed up as concerns lot lines and it has been found that garages and dwellings are located on wrong lots. The property owners are considering engaging the county surveyor to unravel the tangle.

TINLEY PARK GARDEN NOTES

SEPTEMBER

I found a winding path today,
Where goldenrod was on each side;
I would not take what near me lay
But sought far back so its bright tide

Could sweep its plumes in knightly way
To him who chanced this path along
And thru September's golden day,
A fleet winged summer sings its song.

—Maurette of Wilmette
Tuesday, Sept. 16th eight garden club members and Mrs. Theodore Utermark of Homewood motored to Mokena to attend the Japanese Tea party given by the Mokena Garden Club. Mrs. Alice Anderson had her mother as a guest. Mrs. W. B. Combs had as her guests, Mrs. J. Andres and Mrs. Hawk.

Before the luncheon the party visited the beautiful garden of Mrs. Tooley, who in her very charming manner escorted the party over her grounds. When completed it will be just like a private park.

The party was given the pleasure of going thru Mrs. Tooley's new palatial home. We all appreciated this kindness and it was a lovely beginning for our visit to Mokena.

Then we motored to the school house and gathered in the auditorium where luncheon was served and one by one the ladies enjoyed the telling of her fortune.

Before leaving Mokena we visited and enjoyed Mrs. Anton Benson's lovely garden. Sorry our time did not permit calling to see other gardens.

Our Flower Guild chairman, Mrs. Harry Mager received two lovely bouquets of wild flowers from Mrs. John Boyer and a bouquet of pink and red gladiolus.

Owing to lack of space additional Tinley Park Garden Club News had to be carried over to next week.

Judge Waje of Orland Wins Suit

The case which James Cannon of Orland Park started against Judge Henry Waje also of that village, has been settled in favor of Judge Waje, according to the latter.

Judge Waje states that Cannon brought suit for wages he claims the judge owed him, but which the judge denies. The case first came up in Des Plaines and from there was taken to Mount Prospect but the judge not being in, the case was taken to a justice court in Arlington Heights. Here Cannon was awarded judgment of $225 against Judge Waje.

Last Saturday the case came up again for hearing. According to Judge Waje the judge in Arlington Heights had no jurisdiction of the case which was therefore transferred back to Mount Prospect. Neither Cannon nor his attorney appeared according to Judge Waje, and the case was dismissed and judgement was reversed and the cost of the

Boy Runs Into Orland Priest's Car; Injuries Prove Fatal

Eugene Aldrich, 6 years old, Goodings Grove, died in St. Joseph's hospital, Joliet Sunday night from injuries received Sunday shortly before noon when he was struck by a car driven by the Rev. Wm. A. Gorey of St. Michael's church of Orland Park.

The Rev. Gorey told Police Captain William McCanna at St. Joseph's hospital Joliet, Sunday that the accident occurred in Will county at 143rd street and Bell ave. The boy ran into the highway from a wayside store, and darted in front of the car. The driver said he swerved to one side in an effort to avoid striking the youngster and the rear end of the car skidded and struck the boy on the side of the head, felling him to the pavement. The Rev. Mr. Gorey picked the boy up and brought him to the St. Joseph hospital. Later he made a report of the accident to the sheriff's office. The boy's head was crushed and he died at 10:30 o'clock Sunday night. The coroner's jury absolved the Rev. Mr. Gorey from all blame.

Orland Park Gets Start of Sewer System

Orland Park is getting the starting point for a sewer system since a move has been begun by the state, county, the village and the Wabash railroad to take care of the drainage problem on 143rd street. Surveyors have been at work this week surveying for the drainage tile to be laid on the Wabash right of way north to Milk Creek. The cost of the improvement is to be shared by the four bodies above named. Later it is proposed to establish a sewer system in the village of Orland Park and use this drainage line for an outlet to a treating plant.

MOKENA P. T. A. NOTES

Mrs. Carl Hirsch, new president of the Mokena P. T. A. presided at the first and enthusiastic meeting of the Mokena P. T. A. which was held in the school auditorium on Tuesday evening, September 23rd. Mrs. George Rinke was unanimously voted in as the new secretary. On account of the illness of Mrs. Hall, no minutes of the last meeting was obtainable.

There was much accomplished in the way of appointing various committees and all who were asked to serve accepted their task willingly.

The committees appointed by Mrs. Hirsch were as follows: Publicity, Mrs. Albert Braun, Mrs. Paulsen and Mrs. Ralph Coler; membership, Mrs. Emil Mau, Mrs. Karl Krapp and Mrs. John Nielsen; program, Miss Krusemark, Miss Doig and Mrs. Fred Whitlark; child welfare, Mrs. August Pfeiffer, and Mrs. Pauline Krapp; Landscape, Mrs. McCleery, Mrs. Albert Braun and Mrs. Herman Schweser. A special committee was created to interview the Board of Education regarding the purchase of playground equipment. Mrs. Rose Moriarty was appointed chairman with Mrs. McCleery and Mrs. Pauline Krapp assisting.

The purchase was authorized of a set of educational books "Human Interest" and two books for gymnasium instruction. This will be a great help to the teachers in their work.

Mrs. Tom Moore donated a beautiful picture which will be awarded each month to the room having the largest attendance of mothers. Parents can materially help their children's room secure this picture by attending each meeting. Miss Doig's room claims it for the first month.

The bunco and card party which was held at the Auditorium Friday evening was a success and the P. T. A. wishes to thank all for their donations and especially St. John's church for the tables and dishes and St. Mary's for tables and silver.

At the monthly meeting there was an attendance of 34 with 7 new members and it is earnestly hoped that the P. T. Tinley Park Farmer Raises Bumper Corn Crop Farmers have been complaining about the poor corn crop this year, but Henry Siebrandt residing a mile south of Tinley Park is not worried about his corn crop. He brought in two sample ears to George Lorenz Wednesday afternoon which could easily win first prize at any agricultural exhibition. The ears are 12 inches long, an inch and a half in diameter and contain 12 full rows of the finest kernels of corn any farmer could wish for. These ears are no exception as Mr. Siebrandt has 130 acres of like corn. The drought did not seem to harm this corn field. The corn is fully matured and ready to crib. Mr. Siebrandt says that he has found that by planting two kernels of corn to a hill he raises bigger and harder corn as there is not a lot of stock to take up the nourishment that should go into the corn. Careful selection of seed corn is another reason for a bumper corn crop. Mr. Siebrandt estimates that his corn crop will average 50 bushels per acre.

Tinley School Board and Business Men To Plan Addition

The Tinley Park public school is getting too small to care for the enrollment of the many new pupils attending this school since the Elmore subdivisions opened. A meeting of the school board was held at the home of George Rowden, a member of the school board Monday night. A committee of three Tinley business men, H. C. Vogt, J. C. Funk and Edward Henke was asked to sit in with the board to consider plans for relieving the congestion. It was decided that for the present an extra teacher be hired and either the principal's room be used for an extra class room or else room be rented in the Community Hall.

The Lions Club has been asked to appoint three men in addition to the school board and the three business men already named. This will make a committee of nine men who will have charge of planning and supervising the building of an addition to the present school building of the same size as the present building is. The new addition will be voted on in the spring and built during next summer so it will be ready when school opens next fall.

Mokena Scene of Road Building; Culverts Being Built, Start Grading

The much talked of gap on the Wolf Road from the Cook and Will county line thru Mokena to the Lincoln highway, will soon be paved, as actual construction on Wolf road was begun Monday of this week, when the construction gang of the Powers-Thompson company started tearing out culverts in the north end of the village and at the north side outside of the village limits. These culverts are being rebuilt with concrete culverts. The first cement on these culverts was poured Wednesday on the culvert in front of the J. V. Hall place.

The Pronger Bros., construction company of Blue Island has charge of the grading work and are moving their machinery on the job and expect to start grading this week. It is understood that this part of the Wolf road construction work to the Hickory creek bridge south of Mokena will be finished in about 30 days.

Powers-Thompson will lay the concrete paving and it is said that the Wolf road will be paved and ready for traffic by Thanksgiving.

A snag on right of way has been encountered by way of the Marti school and Shaw properties to the north of Mokena not having signed up dedication papers for the right of way required.

In the Marti school case 37 feet is required from the front yard of the school including the school well. The school directors will sign the dedication papers for the right of way required if they can secure the same amount of land back of the school house from the Shaw estate as they are required to give from the front yard. Here is where the rub comes in. When the school directors John, Schilling, Jr., Chas. Eggers and Geo. Abbe took the matter up with Mr. Shaw who is an attorney in Chicago, they say Mr. Shaw said he would not sell the land back of the school for less than $1,000 per acre, which price the school directors say is unreasonable. Mr. Shaw has also a piece of land south of the school on Wolf road for which he has not as yet signed dedication papers according to Wm. North, chairman of the Will County right of way committee.

On Wednesday morning of this week, the county right of way committee, the local road committee and the school directors met in the Marti school yard and took the matter up. The county right of way committee offered to pay for a new well for the school but said that the school board will have to start condemnation proceedings against the Shaw property for the amount of land needed for school purposes if Mr. Shaw refuses to sell for what the school board would consider a reasonable figure. Mr. North, head of the county right of way committee said that his committee will make efforts to have Mr. Shaw meet with the committee regarding the right of way required from the land south of the school mentioned. If Mr. Shaw refuses to sell the frontage needed at the county right of way committee's figures, then condemnation proceedings will be started at once.

In this event the paving of Wolf road in front of the properties involved, will not be laid until the matter is settled, but the rest of the paving for which right of way has been secured will be laid and the gap will be finished later.

The Bell Telephone and Public Service companies have forces of men engaged in resetting their poles along the Wolf road. In the village limits the poles will be set over 7 feet from the old locations. Side-

Back to Soil Movement Shows Increase at Tinley

Employment conditions are resulting in a movement back to the soil, if rural school attendance figures are to be relied upon, according to Edward J. Tobin, superintendent of schools in Cook county.

Reports from his seven supervisors of education show that in the strictly rural areas, exclusive of village schools, enrollment increases this fall over last range from 10 to 25 per cent.

"For five or six years there had been a steady decline in the pupils registered in those sections," said Mr. Tobin. "In the northwest corner of Cook county, comprising the townships of Barrington, Hanover, Schaumburg and Palatine, parts of which are forty miles from Chicago, the increase this year averages 25 per cent. In the southeastern part of the county around Thornton, Glenwood, Tinley Park, the increase is from 10 to 15 per cent."

Necessity for more economical living conditions has sent many families from Indiana industrial towns of Gary Hammond and East Chicago into Cook county neighboring territory at least to live if not to work, Mr. Tobin declared.

Assessment Roll For Mokena Sewer To be Filed Soon

walks are being removed or rebuilt to the new property lines.

The next move is to get the right of way thru to the Lincoln highway. This matter must be pushed to an early settlement. Pressure must be brought to bear on the county right of way committee to push this matter to an early conclusion.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. They lunch together and recall their school days. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. The love-making progresses rapidly.

But she did not see him the next day, although she waited at their rendezvous for an hour past the time. Nor the next day. By the third day she was filled with deep dismay and fear. All sorts of questions whirled through her mind. Perhaps he had tired of her. It might be that the affair had run out for him, that he had never intended to make more than a sweetheart out of her.

But she had only to think of his bright honorable face to know that there was some other reason behind his attitude. She had only to think of his eager kisses to know that he cared. She called him on the telephone at his home, at ten o'clock. His mother answered and said, in a low voice, that he was sleeping.

"Would you waken him. It's important," she said, and stood shaking in the telephone booth, until she heard his voice, husky with sleep.

"This is Ernestine," she said, trembling.

At once there was an electric silence, and then he said, in a voice now thoroughly awake:

"Well?"

She could have cried. "What's the matter, Will? Aren't you going to see me again?"

"Where are you?"

"I'm at the drug store, at Wilson and Sheridan."

"I'll be there within an hour," he told her.

He had not had breakfast, he said, shaking hands with her formally when they met. They went into a little white tiled coffee shop, and he ordered his breakfast and sat opposite her in silent waiting. He looked terrible. His face, often white, was ravaged, and his eyes burned. But he was calm. He had reached some decision, and Ernestine knew that the initiative rested on her.

"What's the matter, Will?" she asked him, trembling again, and hating herself for it. It was awful to be such a slave.

"Your mother phoned me yesterday."

"Mamma?"

"Sure—she asked me to come there to tea this afternoon. I told her I had to work. Didn't you know she was going to ask me? I thought perhaps you told her to invite me," said Will.

A little light dawned in Ernestine's mind.

"Is that the trouble?" she asked. "Do you think I ought to have invited you to my home?"

"Well," he said slowly, "why shouldn't you—unless you were ashamed of me?"

How could she explain without wounding him?

"But you see, Will—it has nothing to do with being ashamed. My first thought was to tell the folks, but then, it seemed they might disapprove of our friendship, and I want to keep it. And then—"

"But don't you see, Ernestine, I can't meet you any more, like this—out on the street, and in the library, and in restaurants and tearooms? I can't do that to your parents. If they don't want you to go with me, I can't coax you to do it—clandestinely."

"Your mother's been telling you all this."

"Yes," he said. "I confided in her. She showed me how it looks."

"Well, then, that's all there is to it. You aren't willing to make the effort to be friends that I am. You don't understand how they'd be. They'd be so nice and so reasonable—and they'd separate us. Just as sure as fate. You don't know them as I do. It wouldn't be your character they'd object to, or your folks. It would be your position and your lack of money and such things. Anyhow, it seems to be a little late to—"

she faltered into silence.

Will looked at her with agitation.

"What do you mean—it's late, Ernestine?" he demanded.

But she could only look at him. If he did not understand, she could not explain.

"You mean—you care?" he asked a little breathlessly, and she smiled tremulously.

"What did you think?" she asked him.

"I didn't think, I guess," he said. "I never meant to make you love me—it was so natural. I shouldn't have touched you."

"But you did, Will."

"Let's go," he said, and paid the bill.

They walked out, swept now into a unity which had been increased, not broken, by their talk. They walked a half mile or so and came to a deserted boathouse, where they sat down side by side upon an upturned row-boat.

"You see, Ernestine," he told her solemnly, "we just kind of jumped into it all. But it's real with me. It's love—and marriage, with me. I never thought much about such things—just took you at what you were willing to give. Everybody has dates out around town, and I didn't want to go to your house especially, nor think about that. And then, we got to carling—and as soon as I began to think about you as my wife, I began to think about all these other things: your money, your family position, and the darned Briceland pride that I know more about than you do. And then, I wondered why you never took me home. And finally I talked to my mother. And I made up my mind to quit."

"Without even giving me a chance?" she asked him.

She was in his arms now, and he said to her:

"Will you marry me, Ernestine?"

"Of course. Today, if you like."

"You'll have to tell your folks first," he insisted.

"Oh, Will," she cried. "Don't stand with them against me. They'll separate us. Why do you suppose they asked you to the house today, if not to find out about you and how intimate our friendship had become, and to begin the business of breaking it up? I know." She told him what papa said about Sadie Hall and the actor Delancey. His arms grew slack about her. He sat a little away, now, distraught, silent.

"They'll think I've persuaded you. They'll think I want the money, that I'm seeking for myself," he protested.

"If I thought you could live on what I make—but you don't know anything about money. You don't know how hard it is for two people—living on twenty-five dollars a week. I don't know what to do, but I want to do what's right."

He looked most forlorn sitting there, thinking, pondering, trying to contemplate a future without her, trying to reconcile his own pride and self-esteem with the position her family put him into.

"I should never have kissed you," he exclaimed. "I should never have loved you."

"Will," said Ernestine tenderly, "you couldn't help that."

For now his sad confusion had caught her in the grip of her first passion. Now she lived in terrible fulfillment the promise her throbbing heart had made weeks ago, when she had talked to Lillian about marriage. Her heart leaped in her like a thing threatened with mortal danger. She flung herself upon him precipitously, her arms strained round his neck. He caught her and held her close. All his being flared up in answer to her own emotion, and his lips sprang to hers in a kiss that was as new to them as though they had never touched each other before. It was a promise.

"Take me today, Will," she cried, and tears streamed down her face.

"Now, quickly, before anybody can say a word to us, before they can be reasonable and reassuring and competent about us. Take me and hold me, now, quickly and secretly. I promise you I'll live on what you earn. I promise I'll take my chance with you—completely. I'll never let them have reason to say that you wanted anything but me. Whatever you have is all I'll have, Will. I promise—"

She was crying wildly. He was shaking, as she was, but he laughed a little, and wiped her cheeks with his own clean handkerchief.

"The lady promises, Judge," he said, and kissed her and laughed at her and teased her. "The lady promises never to sue me for more than a million a year alimony. The lady promises—"

He picked her up and set her on her feet.

"Come on, then—let's do it now," he cried, and seized her wrist and ran, pulling her along.

It was almost evening when Will and Ernestine came to the Briceland house. In the downstairs drawing room the lamps glowed softly. She had telephoned mamma that she was in town for lunch and would come out with Will at five. Beyond Lillian, Ernestine could see Loring's square shoulders.

They ran up the steps, hand in hand, and at the door Will gave her a reassuring hug and kissed her cheek.

"Let me do the talking," he whispered, and they went on into the hall and ran into the drawing and living room. Ernestine was aware at once that the swift kiss Will had imprinted on her cheek had been seen, for papa was flustered and hostile, and mamma looked at her in pale reproach.

"Mamma," said Ernestine, "do you remember Will Todd?"

Mamma gave Will her hand, and he moved awkwardly forward, looking shabby and ill at ease beside the magnificence and self-possession of papa and Loring.

"We've just been talking about you," mamma said to Will. "I didn't know until yesterday that you were such friends with my little girl. I'm sorry you haven't been here sooner."

Will murmured something, and Ernestine introduced him to her grandmother, who looked at him severely and gave a slight snort of recognition, and then Lillian came and offered him her hand and said she remembered him. The two men straddling the hearth acknowledged the introduction with silent handshakes. Mamma asked Will to sit down and rang for tea. Ernestine, full of guilt, sat down close beside him and turned to speak to mamma.

The conversation moved haltingly as they waited for tea. Papa, somewhat maliciously, asked Will about his father.

"He's well," Will answered in a calm natural voice. "But my mother has been almost an invalid for a year now. We feel very anxious about her."

"We are sorry to learn that," said mamma, and then went on quickly: "What have you two children been doing all day?"

There was a dramatic pause, but Ernestine took it up quickly.

"Mamma, you forget that I am twenty now."

They laughed politely. The tea-wagon came, mamma poured tea for them all, and they talked of things about which Will knew nothing. Ernestine could see how they were making him feel like an outsider. Sitting in the deep chair, his long legs drawn up before him, Will was not so disturbing. Her heart was full of tender loyalty.

"You have changed a great deal," mamma said to Will. "You used to be a shy little boy."

"I don't feel very shy today," he told her, and smiled at Ernestine.

His bright black eyes, like shiny bits of anthracite, under his white, domelike forehead, were beautiful, but Ernestine knew that the others could see nothing but his queer clothes.

"Tell them, Will," she said at last, putting down her cup and taking his from him.

They all stopped, and turned startled faces toward the two. Will squared himself and turned first to mamma.

"We've gone and done it," he said, smiling.

"Gone and done what?" asked mamma sharply, and her pallor startled them all.

"We've gone and got married—today."

"Married! Who?"

It was papa's voice, harsh, protesting.

"Ernestine and I," answered Will steadily, and Loring said, "Married!" in a hoarse, incredulous tone, and Ernestine, looking up, saw his face, as pale as mamma's, and as startled, with deep chagrin and consternation written on it. But none of the others noticed him.

"You see," said Ernestine gently, "we were engaged anyhow, and when mamma invited Will to tea, today, I thought we might just as well make it an announcement party."

"You thought!"

"Certainly, papa. It was my idea."

Claims Elephant Leads Beasts in Intelligence

The question of the relative intelligence of our so-called "dumb" beasts seems to be one to which there is no end. Wherever animal men gather the controversy wages hot and furious. "I think elephants are the most intelligent of all animals," says Hubbard Nye, writing in Liberty Magazine. "I realize this opens an argument, for every man who has worked in a circus or menagerie may think otherwise."

"My contention," continues Nye, "is that elephants show more intelligence in learning to work. In twenty minutes you can teach an elephant to plow a cornfield and not step on a single shoot. The big beast's intelligence shines brightest in vandyville work. He is the only animal capable of going through his stunts without a trainer and without cues."

"The three-ton star will stand backstage waiting for his act for an hour and a half, placid, thinking his elephant thoughts, while property men shift scenery right under his trunk and chorus girls go scuttling around him. You can lead him between the most fragile sets of gauze, and he won't hurt a thing."

Successful Search for Pet
The love of a Portland (Maine) man for his dog, which led him to institute a search extending from Maine to the Middle West, was rewarded when Tam, the Scotch terrier of H. Ben Eastman, which disappeared from Portland simultaneously with the departure of a circus on June 3, was found frolicking with the other animals of the circus menagerie in Dayton, Ohio. Tam was in the possession of an animal trainer, who said he purchased the dog for $10 when the circus played Portland.

The Mud of Midlothian

Lazy Lou submits a three word description of the Gardens water situation: "Air — hot air."

Uncle Casey ventures to suggest that if the hot air could be introduced into the pipes Frank Lilly and John Hermann wouldn't have to buy any coal this winter  Heat at a turn of the faucet.

Or coal could be used to fill the holes in 42nd Avenue in the vicinity of Paul Schwaighart's home.

And, come to think of it, the Eagles' boosters could have used loads and loads of coal at Sunday's game.

According to them there were in the game two umpires and George Fikrie. The latter called more men out than the two umpires, both teams and the whole darn crowd put together.

Present at the game were 250 spectators and Joe Walsh.

The 250 were there because it was without the slightest shadow of a doubt, absolutely the last appearance of Fearless Frank Foster as manager of the Aces --- unless they play next Sunday, the Sunday after or any other time.

Joe Walsh was there to present to the public his September series of hoots, catcalls and names for the other sides batters.

Uncle Casey left Midlothian when that went to the printer, so it won't do a bit of good to look for him.

Don't forget --- now that the rainy season is here if you are made of dust your name is mud.

And Crestwood residents are preparing for their annual six month's isolation from the world. --- But they won't miss their Mud; migosh, no.

Fires will soon be started. Which is not offered as news but as an opening for a suggestion on how to get a reputation for subtle humor.

Pretty soon some bright person will tell you that he or she thinks that he or she smells wood burning. To which you reply --- Stop thinking. (Copyrighted December, 1837.)

South African Visits

Midlothian

met in Johannesburg; the seventh was absent, unheard from in thirty six years.

There was also a sister and daughter in Western Canada and to see them Mr. Clark left the Transvaal on March 3rd of this year.

London was reached in forty one days after traveling up the East coast of Africa through the Red Sea and the Suez canal to Cairo, where he saw the 5,000 relics of Tut-ankhamen; across the Mediterranean, through the perilous straits of Messina, past Stromboli belching destruction on Sicilian villages, to Genoa. The most striking sight there, he says, were twelve vast, marble galleries of tombs or vaults, tier on tier, where the Genoese dead lie, high above the muck on which the city is built. In these galleries he saw statues of persons still in the prime of life ready to be placed at their tombs after death.

From Genoa he continued to London through Gibraltar and the Bay of Biscay, then to Quebec, Montreal and Niagara.

Here disappointment awaited him. For the famed cataract was a pygmy to Victoria in his home country. There, when fifty miles away, one can see a vast cloud of spray over the falls as the Zambesi river, a mile wide, suddenly plunges to a depth of four hundred feet and, when within a stone's throw of the falls abruptly narrows to a twentieth its former width. A dense cloud of vapor rises high in the air from the plunging river and as it condenses darkens to the color of smoke. Whence the natives call it Mosi-watunya or Thundering Smoke. For one and a half miles around the falls this cloud releases a perpetual and drenching rain. During midwinter in June and July when the falls can be approached steel girders have been lowered into the waters but bottom has never been found. What goes over the falls is utterly lost; no wreckage is ever seen.

From Niagara Mr. Clark journeyed westward to Alberta where, in the Eastern section he saw the vast stretches of prairie barren and dry. Almost impossible to cultivate with owners listless and weary after struggling with drought and the "seven months winter". The northern part he found a wonderland of lakes and timber and the west impressed him with its mighty mountain range rising abruptly from the plain, its base blanketed for miles with tiger lilies, their orange red blossoms five inches across.

Next on the trip was Chicago, whose fire, according to the visitor, is still remembered in South Africa. Here he marvelled at its vastness, its multitudes, the smoothly controlled flow of traffic and the crowds looking for work.

Speaking of prohibition conditions Mr. Clark commented on the sobriety of Ottawa and Toronto under a board of control; less favorably on conditions in Alberta and Vancouver. He believes ex-President Coolidge's attitude on the question.

He says there is a racial problem, too. In some sections the natives must carry "passes" or identification cards, showing where they work, their pay and their length of service. In the Orange River Colony they have neither voting nor drinking rights.

In the entire Union they outnumber the whites nine million to two million but are subservient and kept in control by rigorous laws passed in the Cape Colony where the same rights and privileges as whites are granted.

ANOTHER FAMOUS 14 POINTS

... DEVELOPED FROM MORE THAN 10 THOUSAND OBSERVATIONS DURING THE PIKE'S PEAK TEST, NOW BECOME YOUR GUIDE WHEN BUYING MOTOR OIL

Between September 6 and October 5, 1929, three popular nationally known brands of motor oil were tested side by side with CONOCO Germ-Processed Motor Oil on Pike's Peak under the supervision of the American Automobile Association Contest Board.

The Board's findings have been expressed briefly in the "fourteen points" below.

- 1 That the test procedure was followed accurately and that no deviation therefrom occurred which might seriously affect the soundness of any conclusions based upon the data;
- 2 That a reduction in the rate of wear occurring during the use of CONOCO Germ-Processed Motor Oil over that occurring with the other oils used to the extent of 76.4 per cent was shown during these tests;
- 3 That greater stability of the subject oil during these tests was shown by records of examination of drained oils being nearer the viscosity of the original or fresh oil and by chemical tests of drained oils with the fresh oils;
- 4 That frictional temperatures occurring during the use of the subject oil were lower than temperatures occurring during the use of the comparables;
- 5 That higher compression pressures were obtained with the use of the subject oil during these tests than with the use of other oils. It would be directly inferred that this was caused by better ring seal;
- 6 That using the subject oil and during each test, greater gasoline mileage for economy was obtained than during the use of the comparables;
- 7 That less oil consumption as shown by the records of these tests occurred with the use of the subject oil;
- 8 That carbon deposits collected from the combustion chambers and cylinder heads and weighed by the official chemist were shown by the records of the test to be less after the use of the subject oil than after the use of the comparables;
- 9 That the subject oil showed a reduction in the case of crank-case dilution during these tests;
- 10 That during these tests the subject oil showed improved compression pressure, decreased rate of crank-case dilution and decreased gasoline consumption, indicating an improved ring seal;
- 11 That a reduction in the operating fuel and oil cost occurring during these tests with the use of the subject oil is substantiated by the records;
- 12 That with the use of the subject oil there occurred less deviation from cycle to cycle in compression pressure at starting speeds (as shown by the records) would indicate that improved compression at higher speeds might have occurred during these tests;
- 13 That the reduction in the rate of wear occurring during these tests with the use of the subject oil as shown by the records would indicate a longer motor life;
- 14 That while there is no reason to suppose that results similar to those of this test would not show under other conditions, it is important that references to these findings be accompanied by the statement that, in so far as the report is concerned, they cannot, as conclusions, be extended generally. However, the inference that they might be so is reasonable and rational, although not conclusive.

Disputed Score, Hot Disputes in Charity Game

The Aces and the Eagles, Midlothian's premier ball teams, played a charity game last Sunday. And while Charity covers a multitude of sins, in that game a multitude of runs just about blotted out charity.

The only Ace the Eagles liked was Pat Rafferty and though they liked him an awful lot Yanking Yiminy Foster cut short their display of the virtue by removing from the game the object of their affection. On the other hand the Aces pushed everything they could to Pop Barnes at short because they liked him so; but they may not have done it entirely from charity. In only those two instances did the light of brotherly love shine at all.

The rest was nine innings of battle for the lead with eighteen participants driving the spectators alternately into clamorous fury or rapturous applause as one side viciously leatheryed the ball or the other dug in striving desperately to hold a lead.

And when the game had ended and the din of battle was o'er and even George Fickler had tired of dispute Jockey Jimmy Foster and Juggler Jimmy Barnes continued to orate in loud and vehement language about the final score. For, as he who reads will see, both Aces and Eagles claim victory.

Bob Tschulin opened the game for the Eagles with a bang, knocking a triple. Stevenson, Barnes and E. Tschulin followed with singles; Bladen doubled. Three runs scored. Ramsey replaced Rafferty for the Aces.

In the Ace's half Eddie Unger drove in two runs with a long hit to center on which he made the circuit. Crowley, the Eagles catcher claimed interference blocked his tag, and the umpire ruled no run.

The second saw another Tschulin triple, a homer by Jimmy Stevenson and three more runs for the Eagles. The Aces came back with two in their half.

Ramsey fanned Crowley and J. Barnes sr., in the third. And for the third consecutive inning the Aces scored two runs. Eddie Unger making another homer.

The first three innings were featured by argument and riot. As the Eagles fell one, two, three before Ramsey in the fourth, the players and crowd cooled down.

Jimmy Barnes opened the second half of the fourth by walking Ramsey and holding Aleck Stevenson's grounder until the two Aces were perched on first and second. McPherson lined a vicious ball to short where Tschulin nabbed it on a running catch that brought down the gallery and nailed Ramsey at third. McPherson being safe at first, Moore went to first on an error. Fickler's hit forcing Moore at second was followed by E. Unger's single to Barnes and Jenkins scoring Stevenson and McPherson one-bagger through short which drove in Fickler and Unger. Frank Stuart ended the inning with his third strikeout. Four runs on three hits made it a pretty fair inning for the Aces.

In the Eagles half of the fifth Brossard's hard single to left was lost when Nick Stuart hit into a double play. E. Tschulin rolled out to Buchbinder now playing third for the Aces, replacing Stuart.

Viewing the ball from both sides of the plate didn't help Larry Unger's batting and he swung three times for the Aces first out, Ramsey bounced to Barnes; Stevenson walked; McPherson flied to Jimmy Stevenson in center.

Both teams rested during the sixth, getting ready for a strenuous finish on the home stretch.

The fireworks began to pop in the seventh when the entire Eagle team made a bow to the audience. Tschulin first up, was out at first but the younger Stevenson and the junior Barnes singled and Brossard was safe when Ramsey fumbled his grounder. At this crucial moment with the bases loaded Nick Stuart clouted the ball to deep center for a triple as the welkin rang and three Eagles flapped their wings across home.

E. Tschulin's single placed over third ended Ramsey's pitching act; Eddie Unger entered the box. Bladen flied out. Crowley was safe when Ramsey, now on second, dropped the ball but Unger stopped the victory march for the inning with Pop Barnes as the victim. Four runs in.

In the second half, Buchbinder doubled and scored when Larry Unger followed suit. Barnes bled down and struck out Ramsey and Stevenson but Unger came in on Stuart's throw over Brossard's head. The rush was stopped when Moore popped to Brossard.

In the eighth the Eagles continued their march with three runs; Brossard drove in Bob Tschulin and Jim Stevenson with a double and came in himself on Blandon's single.

But the Aces could do nothing, in their half, to young Barnes' pitching. They discovered, however, that the elderly infielder, also named Barnes, was beginning to slow up and they

Midlothian Legion Notes

On October 4 the first of a series of fall dances will be given by the American Legion at Kreis Bros. hall. Full details have not been arranged, but will be announced later.

Election of officers Wednesday: Commander, Edgar Spoerer. Sr. Vice-Commander, Al. Clifton. Jr. Vice-Com. Chas. Nelson. Adjutant, Harvey Thomalsen. Finance Officer, Frank Ohlhausen. Sergeant-at-arms, H. W. Brown. J. Druggan will carry Midlothian Post flag at the National Convention to be held in Boston, Oct. 5th to 9th.

REPORT OF DELEGATE TO STATE CONVENTION AT AURORA, SEPT. 7, 8 & 9th

The following is a brief report from your delegate covering the convention just closed at Aurora, which was a very successful one viewed from every angle, and I wish to thank the Post for the privilege of attending.

Sunday, Sept. 7th seemed to be a day set aside for hilarity. However, Aurora opened her doors and closed her eyes, and their were First Aid Stations conveniently located. Regardless of this, many caucuses were held. The Fourth District holding one as late as 11:00 p. m.

On Monday morning, Sept. 8th, prominent speakers, including the Governor, heads of local District Army and Navy Departments, Mayor of Aurora, etc., addressed the Convention. In the afternoon a gigantic parade was held, lasting nearly four hours. Your Post colors were displayed in the "massed colors", which immediately followed the Department Officers at the head of the parade. The parade was witnessed by an estimated one hundred thousand people, who must have been impressed by the large number of excellent drum and bugle corps. Incidentally, there were several small corps consisting of five or six men, garbed in clownish regalia. This might give us an idea to be thought of in connection with our drum and bugle corps. There were also quite a number of "Forty and Eight" outfits, that is, engine and box car, on which were mounted miniature cannons which made plenty of noise. One outfit shot rubber balls into the crowd, which made quite a hit.

Many prizes were awarded, and of course, we will receive a citation for displaying our colors. Monday evening boxing bouts, gymnastics and fireworks were presented at the State Fair Grounds at a dollar a head which was worse than anything the army or navy ever handed out.

Tuesday morning, Sept. 9th was given over to regular routine business, session being held at the East Aurora High School. In the afternoon many resolutions were read and adopted, but incidentally, your resolution in regard to Road Markers died at the meeting of the Resolution Committee, that it was turned down and not presented to the convention. However, in this connection, Tom Davies in seconding a motion in favor of a resolution, remarked that he took great pleasure in doing so, as it was the only one of many that he had presented that reached the convention floor.

Department Officers were then elected, Arthur Poorman of Chicago Heights Post being elected Commander by a vote of 862 out of 1104, his election then being made unanimous by a motion of Pence Orr of Joliet, seconded by Comrade White, these two running as his opponents. Arthur Holt of Galesburg Post was then unanimously elected as Vice-Commander. A thrilling and noisy tribute was paid outgoing Commander Hays for his untiring efforts in behalf of the Department of Illinois. One interesting and breath-taking happening was the awarding of a gold medal to a member of the Joliet Post who succeeded in bringing 495 members into that Post in the last Legion calendar year. A silver medal was awarded a state Legionaire who brought 362 into his post, and a bronze medal was also awarded a downstate member who got 163 member.

Peoria was selected as the next Convention city.

One thought that we brought back is that it is very important that we have a member attend all Cook County Council meetings, as it was noticed that this organization is very active and has much to say. We believe constant contact with that body of men will prove beneficial to our Post.

Would also report that it was greatly stressed at all meetings of the Convention that the first duty of the Legion in its service work is

Fire Destroys Home of Glenn Payne Wednesday

The four room garage house belonging to Glenn Payne at 148th and 44th ave., was totally destroyed by fire at 12:20 a. m. Thursday. Only a small part of the furniture was saved. Mr. Payne had been living in the city. Mice and matches are thought to have started the blaze.

Al Clifton turned in the alarm, reached the scene first and saved a car in the garage.

McIntosh Section May Get Drainage

G. Kehl Sons, sidewalk contractors, have made an estimate of 5c per foot for surface drainage of the McIntosh subdivision; total cost to run about $8000, and including carrying the water to 143rd st. and the R. I. tracks. The matter was brought before the board of local improvements of Midlothian Tuesday evening, but the engineer would make no recommendation until he had more information. There was no definite bid made, but it is understood that should the plan be accepted that it can be handled as part of the sidewalk assessment, merely cutting down the amount of the refund that would ordinarily be expected. It was referred to the committee on streets and alleys, to investigate and take up with the residents of the subdivision.

The board of trustees voted to spend not more than $100 in the repair of 42nd ave., instead of 41st. Village officers are still negotiating with the Blue Island banks for loans on anticipation warrants to pay off current bills. The new street markers will be placed on the north east corner of each intersection. Not to exceed $150 will be spent on opening ditches and culverts. John W. Maloney was appointed special watchmen for the merchants.

N. Healy, chairman of the East End Development association's traffic committee, presented a request for red lights on each side of the R. I. tracks on 147th st. The communication was referred to the committee on public safety.

An ordinance for the renaming of streets west of the tracks was presented for first reading. It provides for the following changes: 40th ct. will be changed to Komensky ave., 41st to Karlov, 41st ct. to Kedvale, 42nd ave. to Keeler, 42nd ct. to Tripp, 43rd ave. to Kildare, 43rd ct. to Kolner, 44th to Kostner.

An accident and death firemen's protective policy, covering the men on the department while at fires or coming to or from them, was accepted.

The parks committee was read for the second time and passed, but the appointments were not announced.

Fire Department News

Five of the local firemen attended the monthly meeting of the Community Firemen's Association at Calumet City last Monday night.

The main topic was Fire Proofing and Fire Prevention.

They were entertained by a fine orchestra and a luncheon served.

Those attending were W. Flaws, F. Bedura, W. Isenmenger, F. Wiswell and J. Entrop.

TO PREVENT FIRE LOSSES

Before cold weather sets in check over your chimney and tuck point or plaster all cracks.

Clean your furnace or heating system, look over carefully for burned out or rusted out spots. See that pipes do not come too close to woodwork and cover with asbestos.

Clean out inflammable material from around the heating plant. Never put hot ashes in wooden containers.

Do not set fire to dry grass without notifying Fire Chief who will make arrangements for protecting surrounding property.

And last give Firemen in private cars as well as Fire Truck the right of way so they can get to fire as quickly as possible.

JACOB SAGADIN, Chief.

SAGADIN MOVES SHOP

Jacob Sagadin moved his shoe repair shop Sunday from 147th and Hamlin to the former billiard hall at 147th and Avers. "Jake", who is fire chief, says that if one more fireman had been present to help, they could have moved building and all.

As a suggestion — if you expect to move, join the fire department and save drayage.

Dog Bites Cop; Cop Bites Dog But No News

The demon reporter scented a hot news yarn this week. A cop, "somewhere south of Oak Forest," said to be "three sheets in the wind" (what ever that may mean), was bitten by a dog Monday night. That however, was not news. But when the cop gave chase to the dog, caught him and bit him in turn, that looked like news. However, the cops name could not be used for publication, so no news again!

East End Development Ass'n Elects Officers

The East End Development association elected officers at a well-attended meeting on Thursday of last week, at their regular meeting place at the McIntosh office at 146th and Central Park. Officers are as follows: LeRoy Burdett, president; M. C. Lindlay, vice-president; A. Hoffman, treasurer; Frank Allen, secretary. As N. Zneimer was extolling the virtues of the sergeant-at-arms' office, he was picked for the job.

Two new members were voted in.

Police Chiefs, Constables of Bremen Form Club

Bremen police chiefs and constables met at the home of Charles Debringer on Oak Forest Tuesday to elect officers of their newly-formed club. The first meeting was held on Tuesday of last week, with Chief Turner of Crestwood, Chief Swanson of Markham, Chief Kaminski of Posen, Chief Uthe of Tinley Park and Constable Debringer in attendance. They will discuss matters of mutual interest, get better acquainted with one another, and from time to time, give benefit dances and entertainments.

At the meeting on Tuesday evening at the home of Debringer, the following officers were elected: Paul Swanson, president; Charles Debringer, secretary; S. Turner, A. Terry, P. Kaminski and E. Uthe trustees; Chief Teason of Alsip was elected Sergeant-at-arms. A committee was appointed to put on a dance about Nov. 15 at Saenger hall, Tinley Park. "Police Chiefs and Constables Association of Bremen Township" was the title chosen by the group.

SAFETY HINTS

By Chief Terry

Boys and girls walking on 147th st. after dark in groups of three or four are taking unnecessary chances with their lives. Cars passing on the narrow street are certain to strike someone if the practice continues. To be safe they should walk single file.

The attention of parents is called to the practice of girls sitting on the abutment on 147th st. near the depot and accepting rides from motorists. Common sense shows the extreme danger of the practice.

South African Visits Midlothian

As long as our neighboring Africans spend their home life in Robbins, relieve the ennui of existence in revelry at Golden Gate park and recuperate from the struggle for survival amid the sylvan beauties of Idlewild they are commonplace and ordinary; they lack news value.

But let one take up his residence in Midlothian and he would be a major event in the nature of a catastrophe or cataclysm. He would be a news-fodder enough for an entire issue of this eminent journal.

Yet an African has resided here the past two weeks. And there have been no rioting mobs, no conflagrations have lighted the midnight sky, no hooded horsemen have galloped through the village streets.

For we learn there are Africans and there are South Africans who don't differ much in looks from Americans, who avoid chicken coops after dark, and who would find it practically impossible to hide in front of a black wall. To the latter class belongs our subject.

He is A. E. Clark, a resident of Pretoria in the Transvaal province of the Union of South Africa, visiting his niece, Mrs. William Fiddler of 145th and Lawndale.

Back in 1879 seven Clark brothers separated and scattered to the four corners of South Africa. Years passed; the country was torn by two wars; three of the brothers fought with the Boers; three with the British. The Transvaal lost its independence, became an English possession and then a member of the Union of South Africa. Another war came and the Union conquered its neighboring German colonies. Still the brothers had not met.

Meanwhile A. E. Clark had entered the Transvaal Republic's civil service appointed by President Krueger, continued as an official when the republic was displaced by English rule, retired in 1923 after 34 years service.

Six years later after half a century of parting six of the brothers

Bremen Township Health Topics

Eleanor Gallagher, R. N.

We find as we go through the schools that there is a very large percentage of children who are neither vaccinated nor immunized. Because of this fact I am making a notation on the parent notice card where I find them lacking in this prophylactic measure.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion among our leading physicians that diphtheria is more prevalent following a dry summer than at other times. This may be the reason we find the State Department of Health putting on a special campaign for vaccination and immunization.

I believe we have larger numbers of children needing dental care than ever before. So far about seventy five per cent of the three hundred children examined need some dental attention.

Five Firemen Resign from Department

After all the fireworks in the fire department, the question of membership in the Midlothian Volunteers was settled on Thursday of last week when Floyd and Elmer McEwen, Fred McDonald, Vincent McCourt and Frank Carey resigned. Neither McCourt nor Carey were among those affected by the action of the board, but their resignations left two vacancies which were filled by two members whose names were left off the previous roll. So the department again has a chief and 17 members.

A recommendation from the department containing names of all members except those resigned, was submitted to the village board Tuesday evening. It was unanimously accepted. The board asked the department for a list of appointments, so that they could be confirmed.

On Monday night six firemen attended the meeting of the Illinois Firemen's association at Calumet City. After the business meeting they were the guests of John Jara-nowski.

Six helmets have been added to the equipment.

Rush Work on Extension of Kedzie Avenue

A steam shovel, dump trucks and a crew of men worked all Sunday on the Kedzie ave. extension south to Claire blvd. in Robbins, in an attempt to lay concrete before heavy frosts. The contractor said that Sunday was an ideal day for excavating.

Paving will not be done at this time over the I. H. B. tracks, as some dispute has arisen over the right-of-way. Pronger Bros. of Blue Island are the contractors.

ARRESTED FOR STEALING CORN

Two Posen residents were arrested by Constable Charles Debringer on Monday of last week, charged by Mr. Jennings of 171st and Cicero with stealing corn from his field.

Judge Thomas Stodd of Markham before whom the case was set, Monday refused to make public the names of the men arrested or the disposition of the case.

Country Club Rumors Prove Unfounded

Rumors were current this week that a country club was in prospect for Markham. As the ditch through the farm of Fred Holam, 164th and Crawford, was being deepened, Mr. Holam decided to have the men put in a duck pond. Hence the rumor.

Refuse Collection to Start Tuesday

Haul out the tin cans, broken bottles and that old Ford motor! Frank Sippy announces that he will start the monthly refuse collection on Tuesday, starting at the East limits of the village and working west.

DEMOS PLAN BIG MEET

Representatives of the Cook County Democratic organizations met in Oak Forest Tuesday night to discuss plans for a mammoth entertainment to be given in Eagles' hall, Blue Island on October 18th that, it is said, will surpass last year's demonstration in Tinley Park. Full details will be made public shortly.

No Affidavits Allowed in Fall Election

All citizens who expect to vote in the November election must register at the polling place of their precinct IN PERSON or they will be barred from voting.

Heretofore the judges have copied the polling lists, have taken names of voters over the telephone or have issued affidavits on election day. All this has been abolished and only those can vote who appear tomorrow or on Tuesday, October 7 between the hours of 6 a. m. and 9 p. m. and request to be registered.

A bill, sponsored by State Senator Arthur Ruebsch, passed the last regular session of the legislature amending the election law so as to require all voters in Cook County living in the territory outside of Chicago to be registered on either of these two registration days.

Chairman B. W. Snow, of the Cook County Republican Central committee, some time ago called the attention of all precinct committeemen to this law. He predicted that there would be an enormous disfranchisement of voters this year unless committeemen made a real drive to get everyone to register.

Remember, if you are not registered you cannot vote. The election judges cannot let you vote if your name is not on the polling list.

The importance of registration cannot be overstated, for several important questions will be voted on this fall — that is, will be voted on by those who are qualified to vote by having registered.

These measures include: a constitutional amendment, which might mean a state income tax; a $14,000,000 bond issue for conservation purposes; $2,500,000 bond issue for the forest preserves; repeal, modification of the Volstead act and repeal of the state search and seizure law (merely expressions of opinion, of course); an act which would make women eligible for jury service; $29,000,000 bond issue for the sanitary district of Chicago.

The fourth precinct has not been divided, the move to give Oak Forest a separate polling place came too late to get approval this year. So all those who in the past have voted in the fourth precinct will register at the Fred Reali filling station at 147th and Cicero.

Leona Wilks Sounds Toxin to Announce Raid

Heralded by a blast on a horn in the hands or rather between the lips of Mrs. Leona Wilks the county police raided her house in Robbins.

A hasty exit by Louis Wilks and Vivian Harris through a rear window was observed by Deputy Salvatore who gave chase. A spirited race ended in the fugitives capture.

Accompanied by Mrs. Wilks without her horn they journeyed to Blue Island jail where an officer's arrival is announced by the jangle of keys.

Reception at St. Lukes For Rev. Bosley Tuesday

A reception and musicale was given Reverend and Mrs. H. A. Bosley, rector, by the congregation of St. Luke's Union church, Midlothian, on Tuesday evening. A very enjoyable program was presented, with residents of the village, Oak Lawn, Blue Island and Chicago taking part. There were readings and musical numbers, including congregational singing. Refreshments were served.

and it would therefore seem that the first duty of our Post should be to direct all the energy and funds possible in this direction. This makes the position of service officers very important.

We might also add that a resolution was submitted to the Resolutions Committee disapproving of the Eighteenth Amendment, requesting that the Legion go on record to that effect. While this resolution was not passed by the Resolutions Committee, it was brought up before the Convention, but was tabled, as it was thought that were the Legion to take up this question it would split the organization and do more harm than the consideration of any other question. After witnessing the short demonstration for and against this question at the convention just closed, this course certainly seems wise.

IMPROVEMENT

Did you notice the new type faces used in the headings of last week's paper? This type is known as Cloister Bold; it is a conservative and dignified face well suited to the better class of suburban paper.

Last week the management of the Messenger introduced several new features on the "patent" pages.
Look them over—there is a page of news pictures; a page of comics; a woman's page.

Even the large daily papers use a large quantity of syndicate material.
As it is purely "home" news the editor has selected what he considers the best type of syndicate material for Messenger readers.

Incidentally, these improvements are in line with the promise of the management to the advertisers and readers—to offer better service with the increase in advertising lineage and circulation.

For advertisers the paper has contracted with the Western Newspaper Union for a new and complete plate service suited to every line of business.

In combination with the Tinley
Park Times, in which Messenger advertising also appears, the Messenger offers by far the largest circulation at much lower cost than any other weekly newspaper circulating in this territory.

Disputed Score, Hot Disputes in Charity Game

stored the knowledge away for use in the future.

Once again the Eagles push started. It began with the incredible for, as Mr. Barnes slowly trotted first after hitting past E. Unger, George Fickre muffed the throw from second. With the Ace of Aces shown up as a mere human, the Eagles went after the ball game with blood in their eyes. Five men reached first and three scored before an out. Then E. Tschulin walked, Blandon singled and two more runs came in. Crowley walked to fill the bases. Tschulin scored on Barnes' hit but Blandon was slow and was tagged before reaching the plate. The big push after netting six runs ended with Tschulin's fly.

With the game neatly folded up and safely tucked away, the Eagles made the last half of the ninth memorable by a complete and total blow-out, debacle or what have you. It was made memorable too by a personal appearance on the part of Mr. James Foster performing as a pinch hitter.
Seven runs were scored by the Aces to win or tie, as you please.

The setting sun saw a tired, hoarse but still excited crowd leave the field to Jockeys Foster and Barnes who continued to yodel about the correct score until dusk had fallen.

Next Sunday on Robertson's field, the Eagles will meet the champs of the Chicago Churches at one o'clock; at three o'clock, the Aces will take on the Garfield A. C.

New York's Visitors
The Merchants' Association of New York, in a recent report, reveals that more than 800,000 visitors attended the hundreds of trade exhibitions and conventions held in the city during last year. The theaters, hotels, stores and restaurants benefited to the extent of some $75,000,000 spent by the out-of-towners.

To Change River's Course
Work has begun on changing the course of the Golenig river in western Victoria, Australia, so that it will run through the wheat and sheep country of the Wimmers district. The project calls for a 25-mile channel through mountains.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia! When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescriptive product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trademark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Among the claims dismissed without prejudice by the state court of claims at its recent session were those of attorneys representing two former representatives in election contests brought before the state legislature during the last session. Brown, Hay and Stephens, Springfield law firm, and Attorneys White and Quindry, of Marion, had represented former Representative Carl Choisser and the claim for $1,153 presented by E. N. Nevins and Pearl O'Brien, widow of the late George P. O'Brien, was for representing Hon. Truman A. Snell, former representative from Carlinville. Claimants did not fare well as a whole, awards recommended being only $8,323 as compared to $123,399 denied.

The new $100,000 Schmitt Memorial hospital, to be erected at Beardstown by George J. Schmitt, former Beardstown boy, as a memorial to his father and mother, is to be built at once, the city having approved a one and two-thirds mill tax for the maintenance of the institution. It will be a 30-room brick building.

By arrangement with the Mineral Industries Committee of the Western Society of Engineers, the state geological survey is now presenting an exhibition in the offices of the society in Chicago, portraying the mineral wealth of Illinois and geological engineering conditions within the state. The exhibit will be open for inspection from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. daily except Sunday until September 26.

Thirty-one counties have been certified to the Illinois drought relief commission as given reduced freight rates on commodities required by drought-stricken farmers, as follows: Alexander, Clay, Crawford, Edwards, Fayette, Franklin, Gallatin, Hamilton, Hardin, Jackson, Jefferson, Jersey, Johnson, Lawrence, Madison, Marion, Massac, Monroe, Perry, Pope, Pulaski, Randolph, Richland, St. Clair, Saline, Union, Wabash, Washington, Wayne, White and Williamson.

Legal action that is being watched with interest has been started in federal court in Chicago by WCBS, the radio station of Springfield which seeks to prevent the removal of Station WTAX of Streator to Springfield. In seeking an injunction, WCBS operators claim they have spent $20,000 for improvements to their station and that if WTAX is allowed to enter into competition with them it will be a physical impossibility for both stations to operate, that WCBS will thus be deprived of its property without due process of law, causing it to default on contracts and suffer other losses. Both stations operate on the same wave length and at the same time. September 29 has been set as the day on which the matter will be finally presented to the court, WTAX going no further in its plans for the change in the meantime.

An appropriation is to be asked from the next legislature for a communicating system along state roads for the state highway police, with call boxes and red lights to be turned on when sergeants wish to communicate with their motorcycle riders. At present the men work under the direction of a sergeant in each of the 13 districts of the state. While each sergeant has a knowledge of the approximate whereabouts of his patrolmen at all times, he could get in touch with them faster with a call box-red light system than by depending on private telephones. It is also possible that an appropriation may be asked to test out the wisdom of taking advantage of the provision of a law passed by the last legislature, that highways may be lighted. It is believed that lights at intersections and curves might reduce traffic accidents. It might also serve to some extent to prevent crime.

The state geological survey, in line with its new policy of making available to science teachers throughout the state the information which it has accumulated during 25 years of investigations, sponsored and conducted an earth history field trip Saturday, September 20, for the teachers of east-central Illinois. On this occasion the geology and geologic history of the region between Mattoon and Effingham was interpreted from evidence in the field. The group assembled for the trip at the U. S. Grant hotel in Mattoon. The organization of the group was in the hands of Prof. J. R. Byerly, University high school, Urbana. This excursion was the third of a series of six such trips being held in various parts of Illinois this year. So much interest is being shown that this may become an annual affair.

Only eight men appeared on the morning of the state examination of those seeking licenses as horseshoers recently in Springfield. The board gave an examination to three applicants in Chicago a few days previously and tested others in St. Louis later. The board of examiners, which included four master and one journeyman horseshoer, was composed of Herbert W. Carey, Springfield; J. W. Heuning, Chicago; Carl Volkenant, Ottawa, and George Langley, Rockford. The spring examinations will be in Chicago, Peoria and Marion.

The eleventh annual state Young People's Conference in Religious Education is to be held in Springfield October 31 and November 1 and 2. While there will be noted speakers, much of the time will be devoted to discussion groups where young people themselves will be permitted to study their personal problems under guidance. Between 600 and 700 young people, mostly of high school age, will be in attendance.

A case before the Supreme court in which a novel question is presented is the one filed in the office of Charles W. Vail, the clerk, in which Mr. and Mrs. John C. Johnson contend that as purchasers of a piece of property in Rockford the person selling the real estate should have advised said purchasers that a negro family occupied property adjoining. The Johnsons sued to recover $6,000, claiming that the property was worth but $4,000. The purchase price was $10,000. The Winnebago Circuit court dismissed the suit for want of equity, the court ruling that the person selling the property was under no obligation to advise the purchasers as to whom their neighbors might be.

The Painters' state conference, held annually preceding the State Federation of Labor convention, was in session September 12 and 13 in Springfield. About half of the delegates were from Chicago. Among the prominent speakers were Frank Curran, of Lafayette, Ind., a representative of the International Painters' union; A. W. Wallace, Chicago, and Clyde Downs, business agent for the Painters' state conference of Wisconsin.

The Illinois Chamber of Commerce has issued a tourist guide for the state of Illinois. If you would like to have a copy, just write to Hon. William J. Stratton, Secretary of State, Capitol Building, Springfield, and he will be glad to supply you with a copy. This is a very interesting book and one that every citizen of the State of Illinois will be glad to have. You can send it to your friends so they can see just what Illinois has to offer to tourists.

Expansion of library work in Illinois will be the main topic of discussion at the Illinois Library Association which is to be held at Moline, October 15-17, according to an announcement made by Miss Anna May Price, superintendent of the library extension division, Springfield. Mr. Carl Roden, librarian of the Chicago Public Library, will preside at the Thursday session, which will be entirely devoted to a discussion of this subject by speakers representing important community organizations. At the evening session Mr. Everett Dean Martin of the People's Institute, New York City, will be the principal speaker.

The number of visitors to Starved Rock state park this year is estimated as being fully a quarter million since May 1. Many tourists will continue to come as the park does not close, and is considered by some to be more beautiful in the fall than at any other time. Praise of the provisions that have been made by the state for the convenience of those stopping at the tourist camping ground has been especially pronounced this year.

Homer J. Tice, of Greenview, who as president of the state fair advisory board devoted a good many strenuous hours to bringing about the success of the recent state fair, is in charge of temporary headquarters of the state drought relief commission, set up in the offices used during the sessions of the legislature for the speaker of the house of representatives. Formation of local relief committees in the counties designated by Secretary Arthur M. Hyde of the United States Department of Agriculture, as drought areas is now underway. These committees will be made up of seven members, two farmers, a banker, a labor leader, a Red Cross member, a railroad station agent and the county fair advisor.

Schools, lacking libraries in their communities, may obtain helpful material on application to the library extension division at Springfield. Collections of books, including biography, fiction, history, science, and other subjects, will be sent for a period of three months, and may be exchanged at the end of a shorter period, if so desired. Application cards requesting this service will be mailed to the principal or director of any school desiring such a collection.

A writ of injunction to restrain the state department of public works and buildings from re-locating certain portions of the proposed hard road between Bloomington and a point north of Easton, on route 122 between Delavan and Minier, is being sought by six taxpayers of Logan and Tazewell counties. The hearing will be before Judge Charles G. Briggie, of Springfield.

According to a state-wide survey made jointly by the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture, the corn crop prospects in the state were rated at 49 per cent of normal on September 1. This is extremely low when compared with the 71 per cent of a year ago and the 77 per cent average of the past ten years.

W. T. Fossett, state superintendent of standards, attended at Indianapolis, Ind., a state conference on weights and measures. Illinois is to have a similar conference later.

Lesson for September 28

REVIEW—THE GREATNESS OF THE GOD-FEARING

GOLDEN TEXT—The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do his commandments: his praise endureth forever.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What Makes People Great.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Makes People Great.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Makes Men and Women Great?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—An Estimate of the Characters Studied During the Quarter.

Lesson for July 6.

When called to go out from his own country and kindred, Abraham believed God and obeyed his command. True faith is proved by unquestioned obedience.

Lesson for July 13.

Jacob, a crafty schemer, through discipline at God's hands, became Israel, a prince with God. Before he could enter the Promised Land a change must take place. Self-will must be broken before there can be confidence in God.

Lesson for July 20.

Moses, educated first at his mother's knee and then at Pharaoh's court, was forced to flee from Egypt because of a premature effort to deliver the enslaved people. Forty years of training in the wilderness was necessary before he was ready to hear God's call.

Lesson for July 27.

In the time of national emergency, there being no man to judge Israel, Deborah was called to take this place. God bestows his grace upon whomsoever he will, regardless of sex.

Lesson for August 3.

Ruth chose to cast her lot with God's people. This choice brought her not only salvation but earthly blessings. Ruth's relationship to Naomi shows the vital fellowship centered in the God of Israel. National prejudices, hatred, and strife disappear on the part of those who are united in Jesus Christ.

Lesson for August 10.

Hannah asked God to give her a son, promising to dedicate him to God's service. God heard her prayer and she named her son Samuel, which means "asked of God." Samuel in his tender years was given to God, and he rendered a distinguished service for many years.

Lesson for August 17.

Saul was a man of fine gifts and had a great opportunity, but made a dismal failure because his heart was not right toward God. He had more concern for his own honor and welfare than for the glory of God. God is more concerned with having his commands obeyed than he is with the offering of sacrifices.

Lesson for August 24.

Friendship between David and Jonathan has been immortalized. This friendship was unique in that it took place between two men of rival interests. Jonathan was the natural heir to the throne, but David was God's choice. Jonathan knew this and magnanimously waived his rights.

Lesson for August 31.

Amos, a humble herdsman, was called from his life as God's prophet to stand before the king. He was not a prophet by succession nor was he trained in the schools. God selects his servants from even the humblest walks of life.

Lesson for September 7.

Josiah, the young king, was loyal to God. Two wicked kings had preceded him, during whose reigns God's law was lost. God put it into his heart to inaugurate a reformation, and in the process of restoring the temple, the law was found. When it was read before him, the king rent his clothes, and proceeded to institute his reforms on the basis of God's word.

Lesson for September 14.

Jeremiah, having heard God's call in his early years, zealously carried on his ministry. He called upon individuals to face their responsibility before God, assuring them that they would not be judged on the basis of racial heritage. Every man shall give an account of himself to God.

Lesson for September 21.

Jonah, a Jew, was called to preach repentance to a Gentile city. He sought to escape his responsibility by fleeing to Tarshish. God prepared a fish to swallow him. This was the means of his chastisement and return to his own land. After chastisement he was recommissioned. At his preaching the city repented, putting on their sackcloth and ashes. God is not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance.

Road Mars Beauty of Famous Mont St. Michel

Modern vagabondism has its good as well as bad points. It was to facilitate access to Mont St. Michel, on the Normandy coast, that the high concrete dike, running from Pontorson for a mile and a half, was built. Instead of the galloping horses which used to drive pilgrims and tourists to the famous abbey at low tide along a natural sand bank, one now sees endless rows of cars running side by side with a small train. It is much more convenient, as one can go or leave the place at any hour. However, that high un-submersible wall has had a disastrous effect on the beauty of the site. The sands gradually rose about the coast, soon spreading above the water mark, and the thrifty sheep herders, realizing the quality of the short salty grass that grew there, led their animals farther and farther away. The coast is continually altering and ruining the isolation of that strange rocky island on which the old gothic abbey is built. It has finally been decided to cut off the dike at the most favorable spot and build a bridge over the gap. Then the sea is expected to draw the sands so that the Mont will be freed from them.

"He calls a spade a spade," is one of the longest-lived remarks on record. It goes back to Plutarch, who 1,900 years ago wrote: "These Macedonians are a rude and clownish people, that call a spade a spade." THE LANDING OF COLUMBUS
(Painting by E. Savage)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS is one of the few names in our school book histories which every American remembers. Along with that name he remembers the date, 1492, and the fact that in that year this man "discovered America." From the information gleaned in those school histories, too, he has a somewhat hazy impression that Columbus was a romantic adventurer who braved the terrors of the unknown which, before his time, had kept lesser men from venturing far out in the Atlantic ocean, and who finally achieved the success due such a dauntless soul. But how many Americans really know anything about Columbus, the man, or what the sum total of his career actually was? As the day approaches for our celebration of his discovery of America (October 12), it is worthy of note that a new biographer has "discovered" Columbus for us—at least, this biographer presents the famous navigator in a new light. He is a German, Jacob Wasserman, and the result of his 20 years' study of the career of Christopher Columbus is a book, published recently by Little, Brown and company under the title of "Columbus—Don Quixote of the Seas." If, as one reviewer has declared, "he probably has come as near the real Columbus as is possible with the material available," then the school book idea of this hero in American history needs to be revised.

Instead of being the romantic adventurer, such as we have thought him, Columbus stands out in this study as an impractical dreamer, with little sense of reality and, except when inspired by his one big idea, pitifully weak, a man who frittered away his opportunities by his continual search for gold and who failed to live up to the promise shown by his single great achievement for which he is remembered. In short, he was a man who figuratively "tilted with windmills" throughout his life—hence the characterization of "Don Quixote of the Seas."

"A certain mystery—almost suspicion—hovers around the figure of Columbus from the very beginning," says Wasserman in the first chapter of his book. "Everything is disputed—his character, his achievement, his development, the events of his life, and his origin. Seven towns in Genoese territory contend for the honor of having housed his cradle; Corsica and France have also made similar claims. It may be assumed with tolerable certainty that his father was a poor weaver, although he himself tried to suppress this fact. Such humble origin seemed to him a handicap, for in the days of his glory he used to talk of his noble ancestors. 'I am not the first of my family,' he would assert, 'who has sailed the seas as an admiral.' On this account some of his enemies called him a liar. Those who do so have little imagination, and a sorry notion of this deep, almost unfathomable nature. The course of his life bears much resemblance to a medieval legend. Over a period of 20 years, with certain intervals, I have been engaged on the study of his history; and every time I took it up again I had to ask myself: Is this authentic? Is not this merely legend? Are not such and such events apocryphal and these others no more than probable? He rose from nothing, a vagabond Italian adventurer, to become Grand Admiral of Spain, and viceroy of a mighty empire; he paid for seven years of glory and power by sudden ruin and such humiliation as few men have known; and after a feeble afterglow of fame, he died a lonely death, almost forgotten."

It is, as Wasserman says, truly "a strange destiny," and considering all the mystery that shrouds this man it is not remarkable, perhaps, that we should have many mistaken ideas about him. One mistake lies in the fact that we do not even spell nor pronounce his name correctly. For the man whom we know as Christopher Columbus was in reality Cristobal Colon. We do not know when he was born. It was some time between 1436 and 1446 and although he seems to have gone to sea at about the age of fourteen, virtually nothing is known of his early history. There is evidence to indicate that he wandered in many places, suffered many hardships and endured great poverty which made him prematurely old, for it is recorded that in his comparatively younger years he was already gray-haired. If we know very little about his early life it is mainly his own fault. For some reason he never revealed much about those years and Wasserman declares that "Whenever he makes any statement about his past, it is always with the purpose of creating a hero-myth. He never knew who he was; he only knew who he wanted to be."

But it is in developing the theme of Columbus as a Don Quixote that Wasserman's study of the great navigator is most interesting. He does it, in part, in these words:

"What gives the figure of Columbus its Don Quixotic outline is not the central error that made him passionately deny until the day of his death that he had discovered a new continent and a new world; it is, putting the matter broadly, the orientation and constitution of his inner self—with all its shifts and pleadings, its prejudices, self-defenses, stipulations and extravagances. So much so that I cannot rid myself of the impression that Cervantes must have been influenced in his conception of his immortal knight by this actual prototype. It is not to be believed that so distinguished a genius created his world-famous figure in what may be described as a private literary caprice. The people of the nation have no less a part in such a magnificent vision than the immediate creator who brings it to the light of day. The centuries labor at it in silence until the chosen brain gives it valid form."

"His most remarkable trait, and the one most suggesting Don Quixote, is his pride, even arrogance, in his destiny—undeniably a force, but a very isolating force, the most fatal effect of which is to make its possessor misunderstood and to set him apart from life. Who could love a Don Quixote, except as a figure of romance; who could understand him except three hundred years after his death? I could not have passed a day with him; I should have found his observations intolerable, and everything he did repugnant. And yet, what an abiding prototype of humanity, of human folly, delusion and greatness! Here, his pride in his destiny or what he thought to be his destiny is based ultimately on a profound redispensation of stern Spanish Catholic dogmatism, through which the character, as the essence of the national entity, appears greatly sublimated and softened and rich in cross lights."

Wasserman also points out the fact that it is a strange paradox that this man of uncommonly narrow mind was the man who was destined to enlarge the intellectual boundaries of his age and to revolutionize its world of ideas. Columbus had one big idea to which he held fanatically—something which we usually regard as the characteristic of a great man. Yet, the German biographer says "he bowed to every force from without, listened to every whisper and fell a victim to every fraud." Another paradox in the case of Columbus is the fact that although he was practical, astute and competent in making his plans, he showed himself "amateurish, short-sighted and capricious" in carrying them out.

Considering the hardships which he underwent in his youth and the disappointments which he suffered in later years, it is not strange, perhaps, that he should be, according to Wasserman, "more as a monk, crafty as a peasant, without a glimmer of humor—a character unrelieved by a single ray of cheerfulness. A man of sighs and lamentations, misery and gloom. But for all of that, his capacity for suffering and his patience in the bearing of it were prodigious and are strangely touching, like stories from the life of a saint. He learnt almost nothing, and knew almost everything that might serve his ends. He was sickly, and bore the most incredible hardships with iron endurance. He sprang from the lowest level of society, and had the manners of a grandee and the epistolary style of a Machiavelli. He knew no enjoyment of life, a home meant nothing to him, his wants were as few as those of a dervish, yet he died of worry because he could not get the forty thousand pesos owed him by the Colonial Administration."

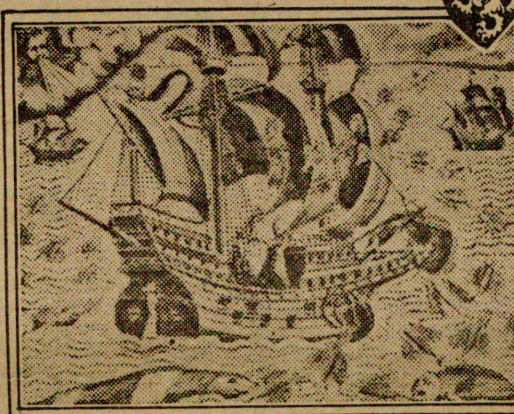

It was this characteristic of utter confidence in himself, of unbending will—pure stubbornness, some might call it—which made it difficult for him to obtain aid for his great venture. But it was this characteristic also which finally won for him and enabled him to talk the monarchs of Spain into outfitting him for his voyage. "They began by chasing him away, calling him a rascal and a fool," Wasserman says. "... then, when

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS
(Painting by Parmigiano)

COLUMBUS LEAVES SPAIN

CROSSING THE OCEAN

he did not budge, they grew uneasy . . . and gave way, point by point, until at last they yielded everything he asked."

And his demands certainly weren't exactly modest! But they were what might be expected from such a character as Columbus. Consider this list: "The position of viceroy and governor-general over all the islands and continents that he might discover and occupy for Spain; appointment as admiral of the world-sea; a tenth part of all treasures—pearls, diamonds, gold, silver, spices, fruits and properties of all kinds that might be found in the lands; exclusive ownership of one-eighth of the lands to be discovered, including all revenues accruing therefrom; and, finally, the inheritance of all these rights, titles and dignities, by his successors, from first born to first born."

Just as the legends which have accumulated around Columbus over a period of four centuries have invested him with an aura of romance, so has there grown up a popular idea that the men who went with him were a hardy band of adventurers only slightly less daring than the leader himself. The fact is, however, that many of them went on this voyage as a lesser of two evils. When Columbus tried to recruit a crew for his enterprise he found how strong was the superstitious terror of the dark Atlantic among the sailors and other seafaring folk. It finally took a royal proclamation, stating that all criminal proceedings would be suspended against anyone who was willing to take service on the ships of the Captain-General Cristobal Colon, to get the necessary number of men.

"It seems unnecessary to say that men were found in plenty," writes Wasserman, "the most infamous company of ruffians presented themselves—highwaymen, pirates, escaped prisoners, galleys birds, thieves, murderers, coiners, branded convicts from the whole kingdom. Columbus had no choice; he enrolled them. (An odd reminder of the tragic-comic scene in which Don Quixote knocks the fetters off the galley slaves, talks to them like a knight-errant and is laughed at for his pains.)"

With such a choice set of companions as these and in three frail little ships (judged by modern standards), the Genoese captain set forth upon his quixotic journey. The story of his voyage is a familiar one and Wasserman, depending as have previous biographers upon the writings of Columbus himself, gives much the same account as they have given. What his subsequent career after the discovery and the return to Spain was, has already been alluded to. A Don Quixote he lived, and a Don Quixote he died, according to Wasserman, who writes:

"When he felt his last hour was near, he sent for a notary and witnesses, intending to cancel the will of 1498 and draw up another. It begins with the Don-Quixotic dictum: 'As I am making a free gift of India to the King and Queen . . . ' He continues in the same style; it is the same fanfare, the same pompous grandiosity, the same extravagance, with which he had in former days dumfounded the prior of La Rabida. He was now addressing posterity; and posterity did the best thing it could do in the circumstances: it buried his words in silence and only kept his name and his deed in remembrance. On May 19 he gave his last instructions and on May 20 (1506), the eve of Ascension day, he died."

ORANGE JUICE, DESSERTS

Orange juice is such a pleasant drink that nobody needs to be urged to drink it. The average person thinks nothing of buying a bottle of medicine that costs a dollar or more, but how much pleasanter and cheaper orange juice is. It regulates the bowels, refreshes and pleases the palate all at the same time, which cannot be said of most medicines. One need not fear any bad results from getting the orange juice habit—the more you take the better you like it and the healthier you are. For a daily drink any time it is acceptable and a glass taken at night is the best of night caps.

Fruit Dessert.—Take sliced oranges, using six; add one cupful of shredded dates and one-half cupful of shredded almonds. Arrange in layers, adding a little sugar, if needed, with a pinch of salt for the nuts.

Cottage Pudding.—Cream one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add two-thirds of a cupful of sugar gradually and one egg well beaten; mix and sift two and one-fourth cupfuls of flour with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt; add the dry mixture alternately with one cupful of milk and bake in a shallow cake pan. Cut into squares and serve with a lemon sauce or with crushed fruit and cream.

Just a plain cottage pudding may be used for various desserts, varying the sauce which is served with it.

Coconut Cream Filling.—Scald two cupfuls of milk, add two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of melted butter, three egg yolks, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and one-fourth teaspoonful of lemon extract. Cook and cool. Cover with a meringue, using the egg whites and three tablespoonfuls of sugar, sprinkle with one-half cupful of grated coconut. Brown.

Peach Tartlets With Raspberry Sauce.—Spread rich pastry over small inverted patty tins. Bake until a light brown in a hot oven. Place them in the tins and fill with halves of peaches, cut side down, cut very thin and kept in the original shape. Pour hot red raspberry jam or sauce over them, return to the oven to bake until the peaches are soft. They may be served fresh if so wished, topping with a bit of whipped cream.

Marshmallow Filling for Cake.—Melt fifteen fresh marshmallows in a double boiler. When soft add one egg white, one and one-half cupful of confectioner's sugar and three tablespoonfuls of water (cold). Beat this mixture, when beginning to boil, seven minutes. Remove from the fire, add fifteen more marshmallows, cut very fine and fold over until the mixture holds its shape.

Chewing Gum by the Acre

It takes 35,000 acres just to provide the flavorings of part of the chewing gum and candy consumed in this country annually. The flavorings in question are the essential oils of peppermint and spearmint. In the case of the spearmint, all the product goes into the manufacture of gum, but peppermint also finds its way into candy and as a flavoring for toothpaste.—Washington Star.

Identity Lost

Do you know your own wife? Yes and no—and probably mostly the latter. In Mexico census officials discovered a man who, after living for 32 years with his wife, does not know her baptismal name. The wife, it is alleged, has become so used to the nickname given her by her husband since they were still sweethearts that she has completely forgotten her real identity.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Symbols of Royalty

The king of England has three crowns: the St. Edward, made for the coronation of Charles II in 1662, and used in English coronation ceremonies; the imperial state crown, made for Queen Victoria in 1838, and the imperial crown of India made for George V, when he was crowned emperor of India at Delhi.

Be Your Age

All of us realize that we can be forty in years but only thirty in health. Likewise we can be forty in years and only thirty in money.—Woman's Home Companion.

After 40 Bowel trouble is Most Dangerous

Constipation may easily become chronic after forty. Continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles—and a host of other disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. When they need help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, your tongue is coated; whenever a headache, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

Cost of Learning to Fly

Learning to fly costs a private pilot an average of $550 and eight and one-half weeks of his time, a survey of the Department of Commerce reveals, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Tuitions for private licenses in approved flight-instruction schools were found to range from $345 to $650, exclusive of board and room, and courses run from five and two-third weeks to two and three-fifths months as average minimum and maximum.

Frankfort Protests

Crossing Closing

On account of being ready to build a subway over route 51 at Frankfort, the E. J. & E. railroad wishes to close the Elsner and Schroeder crossings at Frankfort and have the traffic usually going over these crossings diverted to Route 51, but Frankfort is opposed to having the Schroeder crossing abandoned and the following officials and others from Frankfort attended the Illinois Commerce Commission hearing held in Chicago on Thursday morning of this week regarding these crossings: Attorney A. H. Krusemark, Mayor George Letts, Emil D. Cappel highway commissioner, Henry Geuther, Town Clerk, Geo. Schroeder, Sr. and Herbert Folkers.

Orland Park Band

Scores Real Hit

The Orland Park Community band put on a fine band concert at the M. E. church Friday night. The band is very young but certainly has real musical talent in its ranks. The band under the direction of Peter S. De-Roberts made a decided hit with the big audience which filled the edifice to capacity. The program consisted chiefly of patriotic and religious selections and well known popular numbers. There were also vocal numbers. Rev. Paul T. Sanders the organizer of the band gave a brief history of the band and its aim and purpose. The band cleared about $120 as a result of the concert.

The band is a big community asset for Orland Park.

A chicken dinner will be served at St. Michael's hall, Orland Park, Sunday October 12.

ORLAND WANTS S. W. HIGHWAY EXTENDED

A special meeting of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce was held in the High school Auditorium, Orland Park, Wednesday evening, Sept. 24. About 90 were present and practically every community along the right of way of the Southwest Highway, was represented.

Though the purpose of the meeting was announced "for re-organization and election of officers", it was decided that the old by-laws were still operative and that the organization had not ceased to function under them. Consequently, no election was held and the officers, President, Ed. Cowan and Secretary John Klein will hold over until the regular annual meeting in December.

The Village of Oak Lawn was represented by its Mayor, Frank Harnew; Chicago Ridge by Mayor Ruceis, Judge Klee, Judge Homan and Fred Eiler; Worth by Mr. Schuldt, Mr. Teserow, Mr. Larsen and Mr. Bishop; Palos by Mayor Mahaffay, Judge Kavanaugh, Supervisor Lucas, County Engineer Emmett Flavin, Dan Sullivan and Dan McMahon; Orland Park by Mayor Jennings, Dr. Schussler, Judge Knox Highway Commissioner Beagley and Secretary John Klein.

Dr. Schussler had secured maps and engineers plats covering the complete route of the Southwest highway from Chicago to Elwood. Barring a few stretches, notably between Oak Lawn and Chicago Ridge, Chicago Ridge and Worth, the bridge across the canal in Palos, the overhead crossing at 127th St., in Palos Park, and the short stretch over the Kean Ave. viaduct in Orland Park, the Highway is completed to Orland Park. County Commissioners Busse, Kriz, and Jaronowski were present and announced that arrangements had been made to complete these stretches. The O. K. of the U. S. Govt., and the Sanitary District was necessary before building could commence on the bridge over the Sag canal. This has been obtained and contracts are ready to be let. Commissioners Jaronowski and Busse announced that the stretch between Orland and Southmoor, because of the enormous amount of filling necessary, had not settled sufficiently to permit the laying of concrete. However, a top dressing of stone is to be placed on this section and the Commissioners assured the Chamber, that the section would be passable for traffic during the winter.

Editor News-Bulletin, Mokena, Illinois.

My dear Mr. Semmler:

Perhaps one of the finest characteristics of good sportsmanship was shown recently by an article which appeared in your paper.

The article dealt with the completion of Route 51 and I am sure caused the necessary action toward completion.

Before Route 51 was definitely located, your Village made a strong bid to have it located on Wolf Road. Many heated discussions followed, and through much effort, both roads were obtained.

Much credit should be given your paper for the early completion of Route 51 and I am sure the sponsors of this road join me in thanking you for your article which brought the desired results.

Yours truly John A. Klein

MOKENA

The grade school boys of Orland and the grade school of Mokena played a five inning game Friday at Mokena. It was an odd game, for each side had only a few good players and as a result many errors were made. The score at the end of the game was 6 to 1 in favor of Mokena. One of the features of the game was a home run by Wes Cappel Mokena grade school pitcher.

The Mokena High School baseball team defeated the Orland team by a score of 7 to 5 here Friday afternoon. One feature of the game was the rally of the Orland team in the last inning. But at the end of the inning they still needed two runs to tie the score. The game was five innings. Quite a number of spectators turned out from Orland and Mokena.

A miscellaneous shower was given last Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. Anderson in Chicago when her daughter, Jessie entertained in honor of Miss Beatrice Wallace and her approaching marriage.

The home was beautifully decorated in the bride's chosen colors, orchid and green which was also carried out in the refreshments served later in the evening. A very enjoyable time was had and many beautiful gifts were received by the honored guest. The guest list included girls working in the same office with Miss Wallace, that of the Auditor of Disbursements, of the Rock Island railroad in the La Salle street station in Chicago, where Miss Wallace has worked many years. This Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock Miss Wallace will be united in marriage with Mr. Harry Carlquist of Joliet in the parsonage of the Ridgewood Baptist church, Joliet, where both are members and attendants.

Last Friday evening another shower was given Miss Wallace when the R. N. G. E. girls of the Ridgewood Baptist church entertained in the church parsonage at a utility shower. Again the home was lovely in orchid and green. A pleasant time was had in playing games and contests and lovely refreshments were later served. Among this was a splendid wedding cake baked by Mrs. Clark, wife of the church pastor.

Miss Wallace is a charter member of the R. N. G. E. club, an organization of religious purposes, doing many fine things, the main object being the supporting of Miss Nelson a Ridgewood girl who went to China as a missionary and whom the R. N. G. E. girls support.

Tuesday evening, Mrs. Walter Olson and Miss Virginia Wallace entertained for their sister, Beatrice, in the former's home in Mokena at a miscellaneous shower. The guests were relatives and friends. A guessing contest and games were the diversion of the evening. Twenty-five guests were present. Refreshments were served.
